History, BA

LAHISBA

Only the standalone BA or the accelerated History BA/MA combination are available to ASU Online students at this time.

Learn about the past while preparing for your future. In one of the largest undergraduate history programs in the country, you can explore a variety of time periods and regions, like Ancient Greece and modern Mexico, and topics such as sports, engineering and health.

Program Description

Students pursuing the BA in history study the growth and development of human society from political, social, economic and cultural perspectives. Students learn to craft stories from materials other people have left behind --- constitutions, land deeds, diaries, guns and bones. They learn to make decisions about what to investigate, whom to believe, what happened first, and why things fell apart or came together.

History is a discipline that constantly adopts new techniques of analysis and new ways of gathering and presenting information. Students of history learn to use and create digital media, to perform quantitative as well as qualitative analysis, and to present their findings in compelling ways to all kinds of audiences.

Program learning outcomes identify what a student will learn or be able to do upon completion of their program. This program has the following program outcomes:

- Explore historical evidence in order to understand and compare competing perspectives on events.
- Discern and articulate matters of historical cause and effect and construct a well-reasoned argument accounting for the necessary and sufficient causes of historical events.
- Analyze continuity and change in global contexts, and will understand the reasons for and consequences of dividing history into eras.
- Analyze and discuss historical change and continuity in American institutions and cultures.
- Acquire information about one or more societies outside of the United States, and be able to analyze the culture and institutions of that society.

Global Opportunities

Global Experience

Understanding the events that have led humanity to this point is a large aspect of being a history major. There is no better way to understand historical events than to study abroad, living in the nations where the events happened, among the people and surrounded by the language and culture. Students gain not only memories that last a lifetime but also skills that can help them succeed in every aspect of their professional and personal lives. The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences recommends the following study abroad programs for students majoring in history: https://goglobal.asu.edu/students/major/shprs/history.

Career Opportunities

History majors are in demand. They know how to find and evaluate evidence, form arguments and present analysis --- skills essential to most careers including law, business, education, medicine and government.

Three out of four employers surveyed by the Association of American Colleges and Universities say they want colleges to place more emphasis on helping students develop five key learning outcomes: critical thinking, complex problem-solving, written communication, oral communication and applied knowledge in real-world settings. These learning outcomes are integral elements of an undergraduate degree in history.

History majors seek jobs in:

- business and industry
- communications
• education
• foreign service
• law enforcement
• museums
• public administration
• social services

History is an excellent foundation for graduate and professional studies in:

• business
• history
• justice studies

Career examples include but are not limited to those shown in the following list. Advanced degrees or certifications may be required for academic or clinical positions.
