Religious Studies (Religion, Politics and Global Affairs), BA

LARELPGBA

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

This major provides you with valuable skills in interdisciplinary research, cross-cultural understanding, empathy, critical analysis and communication that will enable you to address crucial contemporary issues, including globalization, health care, human rights, immigration and the meaning of life. These skills are useful in a wide variety of careers.

Program Description

The BA program in religious studies with a concentration in religion, politics and global affairs considers how the study of religion expands the understanding of political culture, communal formation, governance, nationalism, statehood and citizenship in both domestic and global contexts.

Students explore the role religion has in shaping political values, social movements, civic organizations and communal norms, with particular attention on how religion impacts issues of health, the environment, migration, peace, conflict, violence and various issues of social justice. Special consideration is given to the religious intersections of nationality, ethnicity, race, gender and other vital facets of human community and identity.

In addition to the guidelines in the Concurrent Program Options section below, students interested in pursuing concurrent or second baccalaureate degrees in The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences are advised to visit the college’s website for more information and requirements.

Program Learning Outcomes

Program learning outcomes identify what a student will learn or be able to do upon completion of their program. This program has the following program outcomes:

- Formulate a thesis about a significant issue in religious studies related to politics and global affairs.
- Address and analyze a scholarly issue in religious studies related to politics and global affairs.
- Develop a sustained, evidence-based argument about a significant issue in religious studies related to politics and global affairs.

Global Opportunities

Global Experience

Religion plays a major role in societal norms, politics and traditions all over the world. Through Global Education programs (there are over 300 unique programs available), students witness diverse religions and cultures firsthand and gain a heightened understanding of the impact of religion. This understanding, as well as the cultural competency, communication and critical thinking skills they also acquire, will enhance their resumes.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences recommends these programs for students majoring in religious studies with a concentration in religion, politics and global affairs.

Career Opportunities

Religious studies majors seek jobs in many professional areas, including:

- chaplaincy
- diversity management
- education
- foreign service
- health care, including mental health and counseling
- journalism
- law
- nonprofit and nongovernmental organizations
- public service and public policy
- publishing

Religious studies is an excellent foundation for graduate and professional studies in:

- anthropology
- gender studies
- health care
- history
- law
- justice studies
- philosophy
- political science
- sociology
- theology
