Community Health, BS

Are you interested in working with individuals and communities to enhance health? This degree can reflect your personal and professional values, and it can assist you in understanding the environmental and future needs of the community, at every level.

Program Description

Modern health care extends beyond the hospital and into local neighborhoods. Whether it means ensuring everyone has access to nutritious and fresh foods or providing vulnerable populations with preventative checkups, health care is now a community matter.

The BS in community health develops leaders who are dedicated to addressing health challenges at their source and creating partnerships with both public and private organizations to leverage resources. By creating a community-wide response to these challenges, graduates can better advocate for patients and provide education opportunities for people of all backgrounds.

Students with an interest in community change find this degree prepares them as informed health activists, organizers, planners and well-rounded members of the local, regional and national community.

Key program areas of emphasis:

- advocacy for diverse individuals, families and communities
- providing health education, health promotion and care coordination
- providing understanding of environmental concerns and their impact on health
- understanding components of a healthy, sustainable community

Graduates of this program provide health education, health promotion, care coordination, disease management, health care navigation and advocacy services for individuals, families and communities.

This degree program has the same prerequisites as the nursing major; therefore, students may transition seamlessly to this program and obtain a bachelor's degree in a health-related field.

Concurrent Program Options

Students pursuing concurrent degrees (also known as a "double major") earn two distinct degrees and receive two diplomas. Working with their academic advisors, students can create their own concurrent degree combination. Some combinations are not possible due to high levels of overlap in curriculum.

Accelerated Program Options

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

- Aging, MS
- Healthcare Innovation, MHI

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students are advised by their academic departments to apply.

Global Opportunities

Global Experience

Study abroad allows community health students to learn how to address the health needs of diverse populations. By immersing themselves in a culture outside of the United States, students can learn about global health trends as well as how people in another country have advocated for positive change in the health care systems of their communities. Students can find more information on the Global Education website: https://goglobal.asu.edu/
Career Opportunities

Graduates may obtain employment as:

- community health managers
- community health outreach specialists
- health care navigators
- health promotion evaluators
- health services administrators

Career examples include but are not limited to those shown in the following list. Advanced degrees or certifications may be required for academic or clinical positions.
