In communities here and around the world, oppressed people respond in novel and creative ways, both to contest and to transform injustice, whenever it may occur. You can gain deeper knowledge to better understand these troubles in order to work toward solutions. This program provides opportunity for hands-on experience with scholars and advocates.

Program Description

Degree Awarded: MA Social Justice and Human Rights

From labor and migration to education and the environment, the MA program in social justice and human rights allows students to explore key topics and the legal, political, historical and cultural frameworks that contextualize them.

Students may focus on specific issues in international or domestic contexts, including refugee resettlement, immigration and citizenship, human trafficking, racialized violence, and international human rights law and organizations. In theoretically and methodologically rigorous courses taught by experienced faculty from various disciplines, students develop understanding of how social justice and human rights issues are defined by multiple and intersecting forms of inequality and social identity, including gender, race, ethnicity, class, sexuality and nationality. The program is well-suited to those aiming to channel their interests and passions towards ethical responses to social injustice and human rights abuses.

Many students complete internships domestically or internationally, with interns typically working alongside other researchers and advocates for social justice to grasp the complexities of the issues and to hone their abilities to work effectively in both research and advocacy contexts. Internships may also inform the basis of the culminating experience: a traditional Master of Arts thesis, an applied project or a capstone course.

Students in this program gain deeper insight into the theory and practice of social justice, human rights and humanitarian efforts, and they develop practical skills in research and grant writing.

Additional Curriculum Information
The MA in Social Justice and Human Rights is delivered in-person and online. Students in each modality complete the same required core and research coursework; however, the other requirements and culminating experience options vary.

In-person --- Students attending in-person have the following options for other requirements and culminating experience selections:

- complete one of three tracks in social justice and human rights research, social justice and human rights advocacy, or critical trauma studies and social work in addition to a required internship
- complete JHR 593 Applied Project or JHR 599 Thesis for the culminating experience*
- select track and elective coursework in collaboration with faculty

*Students attending in-person who complete an applied project must complete six credit hours of electives; those who complete a thesis must complete only three credit hours.

Online --- Students in the online delivery option fulfill other requirements by completing JHR 503, JHR 504, and JHR 505. For the culminating experience, they complete the capstone course, JHR 549. Students in the online option must complete six credit hours of electives.

When approved by the academic unit, other requirements courses may be substituted.

Admission Requirements
Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of their first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") in applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

1. graduate application and application fee
2. official transcripts
3. statement of purpose
4. two letters of recommendation
5. an academic writing sample (preferred) or professional writing sample
6. resume or curriculum vitae
7. proof of English proficiency
Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English must provide proof of English proficiency regardless of current residency.

The statement of purpose should describe the educational background, scholarly interests and academic and professional goals of the applicant.

It is preferred that letters of recommendation be from faculty members who know the applicant's work well; if these are not available, letters of recommendation from individuals in supervisory or professional roles will be accepted. If letters of recommendation from two faculty members are not available, then it is strongly preferred that at least one letter be from a faculty member.

A writing sample is recommended but not required for students applying to the digital immersion program. If the applicant does not meet the minimum GPA requirements, the application may still be considered.

Applicants should see the program website for application deadlines.

Global Opportunities

Global Experience

Study abroad is possible for graduate students, with more than 50 program opportunities spanning seven continents. Faculty-directed programs tend to be the best fit for graduate students; taking courses with ASU professors during the summer or during academic breaks offers close mentorship and professional network growth in many fields of study while earning ASU credit. Exchange program participation is also possible with careful planning. More information is available on the Global Education website.
