EDSPEDMA

This program is not accepting applications at this time. Applicants interested in the MA in Special Education should apply directly to the MA in Special Education (Applied Behavior Analysis), the MA in Special Education (Autism Spectrum Disorders), the MEd in Special Education, or the MEd in Special Education (Teacher Certification).

This program supports practicing professionals in improving their skills in preK-12 and community settings.

Program Description

Degree Awarded: MA Special Education
The MA program in special education is a noncertification degree program meant to advance the capacity of professionals, communities of practice, and school and other service systems to provide education and related services in inclusive and least-restrictive settings.

Graduates are able to design and deliver education and related services for populations with diverse needs. The skills developed through this degree program include systematic planning for all individuals, support of positive behavior and advocacy for new, research-based approaches to education and related services.
