No matter where you're located, you can earn your master's degree and prepare to educate learners in grades K-12 and support greater equity in education. Remote coursework paired with in-person internships and residencies prepares you to obtain teacher certification and thrive in the high-demand field of special education.

Program Description

Degree Awarded: MEd Special Education (Teacher Certification)

The MEd program in special education with a concentration in teacher certification is for those who already have a bachelor's degree in any field and want to become licensed to teach mild-moderate special education or who want to pursue dual-certification in special education and elementary education. The program builds on connections between educational design and decision-making and is designed to foster strong professional growth and leadership development.

All courses are offered remotely, and students select one of two modalities:

- ASU Sync offers regularly scheduled evening classes via synchronous learning over Zoom. Instructors and students are not in the same physical space but do meet at the same time, offering a live learning experience with peers and faculty. Students completing the program through ASU Sync must be admitted to the ASU Tempe campus, even though classes do not meet on campus. ASU Sync students need to reside in Arizona throughout the duration of the program.

- ASU Online offers classes via asynchronous instruction. Instructors and students are not in the same physical space and do not meet at the same time, allowing students to complete coursework on their own schedules. Students completing their program through ASU Online must be admitted to the online campus.

This program can be taken in three continuous semesters allowing students to complete the program in one year. Students can also enroll part-time over additional semesters.
Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty actively engage in the educational research community, bringing new and relevant knowledge into the program. Students engage in their own research through applied project coursework, deepening their knowledge and improving their practice through research, critical evaluation and application of education concepts.

A series of professional experiences assist students in developing a thorough understanding of teaching and learning as they apply knowledge from their coursework in varied school settings. Individualized guidance through the clinical framework provides students with the support they need to become effective educators.

This program offers two routes leading to Arizona teacher certification:

- In the traditional certification route, students can pursue dual-certification in Mild-Moderate Disabilities Special Education, K-12 and Elementary Education, K-8. Students complete an internship each semester during the first two semesters. Students also complete two 8-week teaching residencies, including one in a special education setting and one in an elementary education setting.
- The alternative certification route provides an alternative pathway to Arizona teacher certification for individuals who are currently employed full-time by a school as a teacher of record. To qualify, individuals must secure a full-time teaching position in an approved content and grade level. This route leads to single certification in Mild-Moderate Disabilities Special Education, K-12. Students in this route are not able to pursue dual certification.

The coursework is similar in both certification routes and culminates in an applied action research project in which students apply what they've learned to address a challenge in their classroom.

Graduates from the traditional certification route earn an institutional recommendation from ASU that is recognized by the Arizona Department of Education for Arizona teacher certification in Mild/Moderate Disabilities, K-12 and Elementary Education, K-8.

Graduates from the alternative certification route earn an institutional recommendation from ASU that is recognized by the Arizona Department of Education for Arizona teacher certification in Mild/Moderate Disabilities, K-12.

In order to teach in an Arizona public school, graduates must pass the appropriate Arizona educator subject knowledge exam, as well as the professional knowledge exam offered through the National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments.

Additional Curriculum Information
For the teacher certification concentration requirements, students complete six or eight credit hours from Internship and Student Teaching. For traditional and alternative certification in special education, at least two credit hours must be SPE internship, and at least two credit hours must be SPE student teaching for one certification.

Students seeking dual certification in elementary and special education must complete both an EED and SPE student teaching placement, which extends the teaching certification requirement by two for a total of eight credit hours. Students switching from Alternative Certification may substitute Apprentice Teaching for Student Teaching with permission from the program.

The dual certification option additionally requires other requirements courses EED 529 and EED 534 and does not have an elective.

Students in one of the single certification program options complete a three credit hour elective and should see the academic unit for the current list of possible elective coursework.

Students wanting to switch certification option mid-program should reach out to the academic unit for appropriate advisement.
