Explore the vast region of Russia, East Europe and Eurasia. Immerse yourself in another culture with a multifaceted plan of study and take advantage of study abroad opportunities to learn a less commonly taught language.

Description

The certificate in Russian and East European Studies encourages students to develop competency in Russian or another East European or Eurasian language as well as the culture and politics of the region.

Coursework leading to the certificate is offered by outstanding faculty in diverse fields of study including architecture, economics, film studies, geography, history, international business, literature, music, political science and religious studies.

A one credit capstone course, to be completed in the student's junior or senior year, is student-led; with the support of an advisor, students can write a research paper on the Russian and East European studies topic of their choice, prepare a writing sample or a graduate school application, or work on a creative project.

A student with a major in any school or department may pursue this certificate and develop a personalized plan of study in cooperation with an advisor at the Melikian Center.

In their junior or senior year, students will complete the 1-credit REES Certificate Capstone. This can be in the form of a reading course offered by the Melikian Center OR a project chosen in cooperation with a Melikian Center faculty affiliate. The project should represent an extended, research-based focus on some dimension of the region's languages, cultures, religions, histories, and/or politics. It may take the form of an extended research paper, honors thesis, translation project, research assistantship, or internship.

Other courses may be used with the approval of the certificate advisor.

Prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements
A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Program Learning Outcomes
Program learning outcomes identify what a student will learn or be able to do upon completion of their program. This program has the following program outcomes:

- Analyze or examine a current or historical issue in Russia, Eastern Europe, or Eurasia, utilize and evaluate sources of information on the issue, and construct an argument or produce a creative project about the issue.
- Demonstrate a high degree of competency, defined as the ability to use language in real world situations in a manner deemed appropriate by native speakers and/or instructors of the language, in a REES Language.

Global Opportunities
Global Experience
The Critical Languages Institute at Arizona State University's Melikian Center is a national training institute for less-commonly taught languages, offering summer intensive courses and study abroad programs around the world. Languages taught include Albanian, Armenian, Bosnian/Serbian/Croatian, Hebrew, Indonesian, Kazakh, Macedonian, Persian/Farsi, Polish, Russian, Tatar, Turkish, Ukrainian and Uzbek.

The Critical Languages Institute instruction in Arizona and abroad is practically focused and proficiency-based. Students not only study a language but learn to live that language. Specially designed summer intensives on the ASU campus prepare students, even beginners, to function competently in the language they are learning when they go abroad. Once overseas, students live the language as they participate in family life, join sports and gaming clubs, sing in choirs, join theater groups, appear on television, give presentations and make speeches, participate in neighborhood projects and otherwise actively immerse themselves in the culture.

Students may learn more on the Melikian Center website at https://melikian.asu.edu/cli.

Career Opportunities

Students who complete the Russian and East European studies certificate enhance their prospects for highly selective study abroad fellowships, including Fulbright, Boren, and CLS, and for admission to graduate study. Certificate holders may also qualify for unique entry-level government employment opportunities at agencies such as the State Department and the NSA.
